Inference

Smokejumpers demonstrate that they are adaptive.

Evidence

After getting trapped, the text states that their first thought was to move to “safety” in a “burned-out section.”

Elaboration

This suggests that smokejumpers have to be ready to quickly adjust their plans.

Evidence

The text also states that they “soaked” their shirts and “wrapped (them) around their heads” for added “protection.”

Elaboration

It’s clear that smokejumpers consider not only their changing physical environment but their personal safety, too.

Conclusion

These details show that smokejumpers must be able to adapt as a result of the unexpected and the unpredictable nature of their job.
